AN FIRM LOANS TO FRANCE AT 300 PERCENT

$208,250,000 SEEKED FOR GERMANY

Lamont Bares Flood of Foreign Bonds Before Senate as House Debt Battle Opens

London, Dec. 18 (AP)—News from Washington regarding the attitude of Congress toward international debts caused a sharp dip in the sterling exchange today. The dollar rate fell from an even quotation of 4.8 to 3.37, affecting other rates on London unfavorable. The decline was out of proportion to the amount of business.

Washington, Dec. 18—France has borrowed $200,000,000 from J. P. Morgan & Co. since the war.

Repeating details of the various loans of the company, it is said that a partner, Thomas W. Lamont, told the Senate Finance Committee today that all $200,000,000 had been repaid.

The loans were made on bonds which the banking company bought in London, paying France 100 and 150 respectively on each $100,000 bond, and selling for 100 and 150.

He said the difference in the amount received by France and that for which the bonds were sold was not profit, but was taken up by distribution expenses.

He said the amount of German debt (not credit) in the country had been $200,000,000, but that it had been reduced to $100,000,000.

Lamont said he had seen a copy of the House report on the subject for Germany.

During the House debate on the subject, the committee was divided on the subject of the amount of the loan, but the majority was in favor of the $200,000,000.

He said the amount of the loan was $200,000,000, but that it had been reduced to $100,000,000.

AUTHORITY OF LAW. He did not act under the authority of the CONSTITUTION. That fundamental law of the land makes no provision for the delegation to a White House conference, made up of hand-picked Senators and Representatives, OF THE POWER THAT BELONGS TO CONGRESS.

Senator Johnson was not consulted and has never consented to this agreement.

Speaker Garner, the new leader of the Democratic party, never gave his consent to this agreement.

No Senator and no Representative in Congress ought to have consented to this agreement.

They had no RIGHT to consent to it because they CANNOT SPEAK FOR CONGRESS.

What all the leaders summoned to the White House or "consulted" by telephone and telegraph should have replied, was that if the President desired the consent of Congress to make this agreement, he should call Congress in extra session and lay the matter before that body IN THE WAY THAT THE CONSTITUTION DIRECTS.

That is what Senator Lodge of Massachusetts replied when President Wilson, at Paris, solicited his opinion as to what reservations to the treaty of Versailles the Senate would approve.

Mr. Lodge answered in substance: "No Senator can speak for the Senate. If the President wishes the views of the Senate in regard to reservations he should convene the Senate in extra session and request its views in the regular way."

That is what President Wilson was finally compelled to do and the Senate rejected the treaty of Versailles.

That is what President Hoover should have been compelled to do, regardless of whether the Congress approved or rejected his moratorium agreement.

By refusing to ratify this agreement without debate, however, the Congress, under the leadership of the Democratic speaker, is belatedly but finally calling a halt upon the attempt of Mr. Hoover to EXERCISE DICTATORIAL POWER, UNAUTHORIZED BY THE CONSTITUTION AND UNJUSTIFIED BY ANY CONDITION EXISTING AT THE TIME HE MADE HIS MORATORIUM AGREEMENT.

It is high time for the Congress to reassure the country that the government of the Constitution still lives.

It is high time, also, for foreign governments to be put on notice that the government at Washington IS A CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT AND NOT A DICTATORSHIP.

WIFE ACCUSES EX-JAIL GUARD OF NEGLIGENCE

The domestic affairs of Matthew A. Callahan, retired State prison guard, which have been in the courts off and on for six years, were revived today by a new public airing in Callahan's court today.

Callahan appeared before Judge Sullivan on a charge of non-support brought by his estranged wife, Mary, who lives in Washington at Washburn. Callahan lives in Harvard St., Charlestown.

WIFE IN NEED
Mrs. Callahan told the court she was destitute and receiving public aid and that she had tried to return to her husband but had been thrown out.

The name of Felix O'Brien, once-legalized former convict, who figured in previous hearings of the Callahan difficulties, cropped up again today and Mrs. Callahan stated, under questioning of her lawyer, William Schabron, that there was nothing about O'Brien's appearance to thrill or entice any woman.

Her only relations with her husband, she said, were business, she said.

Without and finding Judge Sullivan continued the case until Jan. 15 at the conclusion of testimony.

BUT WAS DROPPED
Mrs. Callahan sued for divorce in 1925 and at the trial her son Alfred testified he changed his name from Callahan to Gregory while at Harvard because he feared his father's actions would reflect on him. The divorce suit was dismissed.

Then Callahan sued for divorce naming the son as responsible for his unhappiness but that suit, too, came to naught.

BUYING AUTO, IS STRANGLED

Prepared Dec. 13 (AP)—Richard H. Haley, 48, of Ayer, was found dead this morning strangled to death under an automobile he was considering buying.

Emmett Willis of Ayer, and the owner of the car, also was pinned through the car, but was only slightly injured.

The accident occurred last night when the car skidded on ice and overturned, pinning Haley by the neck. The accident was discovered by Fred Lacey who called Police Chief Curtis and they lifted the car enough to release Willis and remove the body of Haley.

U. S. Puts O. K. on Canal Landing Pier

Permission also was granted for dredging work in the canal to provide a turning basin and approaches to the pier.

IN SANTA'S FIRST STOP THEY GO TO BED EARLY OR LOSE

Oak Island, Minn., Dec. 13 (AP)—Here in the isolated, northernmost area of continental United States children will go to bed early Christmas eve—at least by 8 p. m. if they are good.

They will remember a tradition which was old when some of the Angels left them were only inches high. This tradition has it that Santa Claus makes his first stop here on his way from his north pole abode to countless homes where children have earned his giving.

They are quite close on the point that Oak Island, which is a post office in its own name is hardly as isolated as it seems. It is only 10 miles from the nearest town.

He had a conversation with Santa Claus.

"I was sitting by the fire smoking one Christmas eve," he said. "All of a sudden I saw old Santa and he mistook me for a child."

HUSBAND BEATS WIFE ACCUSED IN AUTO CASE

Two black eyes are sufficient punishment for a traffic violation according to the ruling of Judge Lawrence C. Brady in the case of Mrs. Marnie Mather, 28, of Putnam st., Somerville.

The Maiden police told the court that Mrs. Mather became violent when the summons was served on her wife and administered a right-hand punch to her eye.

"In my opinion, your honor," said Capt. Ayward, "this lady has suffered enough for a minor traffic violation."

"I am inclined to the same opinion," replied the court. "The case is closed on file."

All other defendants in the traffic court paid $5 fines.

HOTEL BURNED IN JEFFERSON

Jefferson, Dec. 18.—Nine persons died in a fire which broke out when fire swept the Eagle Lake Hotel, a summer resort, here early today.

William Nason, owner, rushed through the building, saving tenants and assisting them in safety. Fire apparatus from Rutland and Hudson was rushed to the scene to aid in the local department. The fire started in the cellar and swept up through the three-story building and front. Only the outside walls remained standing. Fire officials estimated the loss at $12,000.

A large crowd was drawn to the scene by the flames. Staffs from the Hudson barracks maintained order.

POLITICS—Notes and Gossip About People You Know

WORK HARD

OPPOSITE MEMORIAL
The Suffolk Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, has gone on record in opposition to spending money for any state memorial at this time. If there is any money to spare, says the Council, it should be used in repaying the firetrucks which have been condemned at the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea. And when the time comes for putting up a memorial, the Council believes, it should be utilitarian as well as inspirational.

STEARNS' WORKER
Dr. A. Warren Stearns, commissioner of correction, is what is known as a glutton for work. What between his state job, being dean of Tufts Medical, and other activities, including numerous speaking dates and writings, he rarely gets to bed the same day he gets up.

THREE APPOINTED
Three men were today appointed members to the public welfare department for a period of three months by Mayor Curley. They are James R. Kieran, of 40 Mount st., and William S. Ganser, of 85 Elder st., both of Dorchester, and Patrick J. Finn, of 305 Boston st., South Boston.

SULLIVAN OUT
John A. Sullivan, assistant secretary to Mayor Curley, is confined to his home in West Boston as a result of a heavy cold from which he has been suffering for the past few days.

BACK TO WORK
Assistant City Engineer Joseph Michalski, who has been on the sick list for nearly a month, returned to duty at City Hall yesterday.

Victim of "Masked Gunman" Is Dead

Waterbury, Conn., Dec. 18 (AP)—Shot Sunday night in his home by a "masked gunman," John Kiviat, 32, died in a hospital here today. His wife, Anna, 34, shot by the same man, is in a critical condition.

Joseph Biondello, 47, a neighbor, is held without bail. Mrs. Kiviat charged he entered their home masked and opened fire without warning. She told of a gunshot that followed her remark of "Stop, trouble for sitting down trees on her property."

HOUSES FOR PEOPLE AND MORE PEOPLE FOR HOUSES

By GILBERT SELDES

IT APPEARS THAT MY CITY, skyscrapers only, would evoke little sympathy from Raymond Hood, builder of some of our best skyscrapers. Mr. Hood, justifiably annoyed by too much talk about city crowding, has declared flatly that "congestion is good. It is the best thing in New York. The glory of the skyscraper is that it has provided for the congestion so well." Mr. Hood is a fighting architect, but a better architect than a fighter. He sings his song in praise of congestion, and songs should not be analyzed, although the composers and singers of "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries" may stand psychoanalysis without any great harm. Mr. Hood, for instance, says, "the larger the city, the broader is the opportunity for kindred spirits to find one another, and to play and work together." This is doubtful; but even if it is true, it is in praise of air, not of congestion.

250,000 Kibitzers

Mr. Hood considers that the wonder of New York is that it is the first place in the world where a man can work within a ten-minute walk of a quarter of a million people. Whether he CAN work is again doubtful, and why he should want to walk ten minutes to work is a nice question. And why those people should not live in pleasant places, coming in to the city for their work and amusement, leaving it for their private lives, is still more puzzling.

13 Weeks in the Subway

A new development is announced for New York—a group of apartments in the old tenement area, intended for white-collar workers, and placed near enough to Wall Street for them to walk to work. The promoters possibly exaggerate when they assume an hour's ride each way for every worker, but the figure cannot be too far out. And on that basis they work out the amazing calendar of work and leisure which proves that those who live uptown and work downtown spend thirteen weeks—one quarter of a year—every year in the subway and on the L.X. They suggest that by walking to work, a man might save wear and tear and give himself a three-month vacation and still do as much work as he does now. Or nearly—counting a fifteen minute saunter each way.

The catch in this is what we all know—that the two hours saved would not be cumulative; we would fritter them away and gain little from them. The mathematically are right, but the results are spoiled by the human equation. The redemption of tenement districts, the creation of new buildings, and even the faintest effort to allow some people to escape from the indignities of American traffic, all are desirable; but none of them is fundamental.

A Radical View

I was particularly impressed by an editorial on housing in the New Republic which seems to me almost ideal—the sort of thing which a critical journal should do almost all the time. It affirms the paper's stand for a government subsidy for housing and it mocks at the President's "humorous proposal" for Home Loan Discount Banks; these are political ideas. At the same time it is severely practical. It tells things which do not often get into print.

For instance, that if five billion dollars were expended, only 10 per cent of the population, excluding farmers, could enjoy new housing. And that 37 per cent of the population, with less than $2000 a year income, cannot be brought into home ownership (let alone into good houses) with any prospect of profit for the builder. Finally, here is the program in brief:

Homes for People

"We must call a halt upon the use of public funds for utilities and transportation system which help to subsidize the building of new slums. . . . We must wage a campaign in rear down the great bulk of ancient and modern housing throughout the country—it is not confined to the big industrial cities—and to lay out a thousand new communities on modern lines. The objective cannot be achieved by building four sound walls and a roof; it is a matter of obtaining at the same time fresh air, sunlight, open spaces, playgrounds, gardens, safe and quiet streets; that is, communities built not merely for working efficiency, but for the care of the young and the pleasurable use of leisure."

More Assenting Voices

None of this is romantic, but it is a slight better than depression and revolution. Mr. Paul Massie, searching for ways out of our plight, sees hope in a great housing problem: Mr. Hoover gives his blessing to a program which seems inadequate and unconvincing to radicals, but at least he gives his blessing to something specific; Mr. H. G. Wells sees the rebuilding of London as a desirable way out; and practical businessmen are beginning to buy land and to make plans.

The encouraging thing in all the New Republic criticism is the implication that not five, but fifty billion dollars could be spent for housing, not one cent of which could be called wasted, every dollar of which would go for something to be used for years, creating housing, which would be a typical modern plan. In his new book on "The Literary Mind," Max Eastman makes it clear that if literature holds "half" of it will lose its place "not only in education, but in the entire scheme of social values." Poets have also been warned to get closer to economic problems.

So that a poet with imagination, feeling, and a pocket dictionary in the fall of the year and the pound sterling, may write us quite an epic called "Polar Puddles Beguiled," showing the progress of the race until it follows Paddy and Amundsen in a great trek to the poles, down, waits for the last rain, and returns to the puddle going out, as T. E. Eliot said, not with a bang, but with a whimper, (Copyright, 1931.)

put out of a better car. She again told one of the men to bring a car. Another man will be along to pick you up in a little bit." Maxine told Sanford had received an anonymous telephone call which instructed him where to find the victims. Accompanied by other officers he drove to the designated place.

"They failed to find the victims, but after circling around a woman stopped out and asked:

"Is this the car that came for me?"

The woman was Mrs. Donnelly, but she was not Mrs. Donnelly when she first entered the garage, but soon recovered her own name sufficiently to tell of the abduction.

The kidnapping occurred at some time late Wednesday, as she was returning from her domestic office. At that time she was driving another machine pulled by three men got out.

GET HER IRISH ET

Blair was forced to move from the wheel and one of the men got into the rear seat with Mrs. Donnelly. As the car moved on, the men started to drive.

"That got my Irish up," she said, "and I fought. But they really got a work over my head."

Blair also was blindfolded and after a short drive, they were transferred to another car.

"We went out Riverside boulevard to Huntington road," she related. "I was kicked and screaming all the way, trying to attract attention and avoid a revolver into the side of my chauffeur."

She said that once when the car slowed down, she was required to make a leap, but feared being run over by another car.

"It was six o'clock when they captured me," she said. "We drove for a long time and then we were taken into a dark house. I was seated without delay and they immediately told me they wanted money."

"They took you because we want money," they told me. "We are not going to hurt you if you will do as we tell you. We will treat you all right but we want $25,000."

"I said, oh, my land! I haven't that much money."

After some discussion as to whom the ransom demand should be delivered, they decided to write to her attorney, James J. Callahan.

"That is the thing got out, referring to the news of kidnapping and they came to me and told me they realized they were should have taken a woman and that they were going to release me. They told me to get up and they put the sack over my head again. They put another over Blair's head and took us out to the car."

Like to See Hanging Crown Kidnaping, Says Reed

Kennebec, Dec. 18 (AP)—"It is like to see this thing crossed with a hanging," former Senator James A. Reed said today in commenting on the kidnapping of the neighbor and client, Mrs. Nell Donnelly.

GRID STAR WINS POINT IN COURT FRAUD SUIT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP)—The United States district court today rendered a decision in favor of the Grid Star, a small company which has been fighting a long and costly battle to clear its name from the charge of fraud in the sale of its "Grid Star" product.

The court, in a decision rendered by Judge Charles E. Smith, found that the Grid Star was not a fraudulent scheme, as charged by the United States government, and that the company was entitled to a judgment of $100,000 in damages.

The Grid Star, which was founded in 1928, had been accused of selling a product which was claimed to be a "miraculous cure" for various ailments. The government had charged that the company had used fraudulent methods to sell its product and had obtained large sums of money from its customers.

The court, in its decision, found that the Grid Star was a legitimate business and that its product was not a fraudulent scheme. The court also found that the company had been treated unfairly by the government and that it was entitled to a judgment of $100,000 in damages.

Pastor Says Food Is Best Gift to Needy on Xmas

Rev. Arthur T. Brown, pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church in Roxbury, today makes his appeal in behalf of the needy and unemployed on Boston.

Rev. Arthur T. Brown

The past Christmas, food was the most important gift for the poor and unemployed in Boston. Perhaps never in the city's history has there been so much need for food as this year.

We ought to share our Christmas food with others who are less fortunate and more in need. While Christmas is a time of joy and gladness for the children, it is a time of sorrow for the adults. We need to share our food with those who are in need.

Yes, it's going to be an old-fashioned Christmas - judging from the number of practical gifts we've sold. And the day will be lots of fun for the man who gets something he needs as well as something he wants. Tell us his tastes - your appropriation - we'll suggest several things for your consideration.

We can heartily and safely recommend our Kenworth Neckwear, 55c to $3. It's not exactly an original gift idea, but one that every man welcomes IF the patterns and colors are right. We'll help you choose from a stock that is well nigh plus-perfect. Or a Kennedy Gift Certificate will enable him to choose his own.

LOVE'S PRICE TAG ON ERRING HUSBANDS
—By HELEN ROWLAND—

It is a fact that a husband is worth a hundred thousand dollars, when it is a faithful husband's love worth.

husbands should be listed in Bradstreet's.

Many a husband is a good one, but a bad one is a bad one. A husband is a good one when he is a good one.

It is a fact that a husband is worth a hundred thousand dollars, when it is a faithful husband's love worth.

There is a price tag on every husband. It is a price tag that is worth a hundred thousand dollars.

We Are All Different Inside

By ELSIE ROBINSON.

YOU'VE always wanted to be different.

People who are different fascinate you.

Sometimes they irritate you.

But there's something about them that holds you.

Their strong, unexpected things they say and do . . . the impression they give of being strong and free and quite independent of other people's opinions.

You wonder how they get that way. What is their inside life like?

Are they born that way? You suppose they are. And you envy them their luck. It must be wonderful to be able to be different. To live a distinct, dramatic life of one's own.

You'd like to say and do unexpected things like that. But you don't have a chance.

And the exasperating thing is that you're sure you, too, could be different. You'd had a chance. You've never really felt like everybody else—not deep inside. If you could have YOUR way . . . if you could say what you really meant to say . . . and do what you really want to do . . . you'd show 'em!

That's the way you feel about yourself, isn't it?

AUD YOU'RE RIGHT!

YOU ARE different inside.

No one else feels about things as you feel about them.

You were made in your own peculiar pattern.

And if you had developed that pattern your life could have been infinitely more colorful and powerful, adventurous and mysterious, than it has been . . . you could have been as "different" as any of these powerful, dramatic people you envy.

That's why you've developed your pattern . . . your unique pattern.

They haven't developed your own pattern because you were AFRAID and because you were LAZY.

Those "different" people you envy—they weren't given free scope to develop their personalities. The difficulties were not removed, for their path, any more than from yours. They overcame them by being different. People got mad at them and laughed at them. They muddled them with their lives. They were AFRAID OF THEMSELVES.

They didn't think of their own thoughts. They insisted on planning their own lives. They wanted to be understood . . . sometimes they meant malicious persecution. BUT THEY FELT IT WAS WORTH THE PRICE.

And today you're envying them their power and color, their freedom and independence!

You could have had—your own! You still have all these precious qualities and privileges in the pattern of your life. IF YOU'RE WILLING TO PAY THE PRICE. Want to try?

DO ONLY THINK ONLY. SAY ONLY THOSE THINGS THAT REALLY EXPRES YOU YOURSELF.

Use words. Don't say ALL you think. Don't do EVERYTHING you want to do. Remember you are living in a crowd world and show due regard for the rest of the inhabitants. But do not be a slave. Do not follow wherever the flock leads.

BE HONEST. BE BRAVE. BE YOURSELF IN EVERY ACTION AND WORD AND THOUGHT OF YOUR LIFE.

Start doing that and from the hour you start, life will become an amazing and fascinating adventure. And you will become an INDIVIDUAL, instead of an "also ran."

Daily True Story

Forest Love

WHEN GEORGE MARRABEE at last got to the door he had been tracking all morning he found it not good enough. His quarry, badly wounded, had fallen, risen again and sped off.

Marrabee knew it was only a question of time when it would drop and, for the last two hours, he had been following the trail of blood over hill and dale, working his strength and wits to the limit.

Suddenly, careless in his eagerness to catch the deer, he had become wedged between a couple of boulders and there he lay, his head near the ground in front of him, his body in the air.

Only with the greatest effort could he move, and he sensed the near impossibility of making his way back to his cabin.

"My God," he groaned, "I must get help! Help! Help!"

His feeble shouts resounded through the stillness.

"Jack! Jack! Jack!" he heard a faintly muffled voice.

"Who is Jack?" he heard a faintly muffled voice.

"With me hunting—rain down the fork of the river—tell!"

The words faded away as he sank into unconsciousness.

Then an anxious, bearded face was bending over him.

"Och, murther, everything all right now. Do you feel better?"

"Where am I?"

"You are with me, m'lad. Pierre Vallard. You are in my cabin. I carried you here after you hurt yourself. Everything is what you call O. K. Now, m'lad, I called 'come, attend to m'lad.' He came back at once."

PUNISHED EVERY YEAR.

Marrabee, lying on his bed, his head swathed in bandages and his feet stiff at the foot of the bed, himself looking into the most beautiful brown eyes he had ever seen. A pleasant face was framed in hair of gold and on the forehead a line of honest an appealing smile.

"You are Marie?" he murmured. "Or is it an angel?"

"No, m'lad. I am Marie. But it is for you to rest. Don't talk until the morning. You are after your head is badly wounded. My father has set your broken leg. Ah, my father! He can do anything. But now, drink this water and sleep."

With the morning he learned that his presence here in every season at deer hunting time, it seemed, old Pierre brought Marie back to the wilderness they had left years before to give Marie a chance to live as she wished. But the few weeks they spent there were all too brief. After her father, Marie said, had gone.

"You darling," cried George, "then you will marry me!"

"Of course I will, George," she whispered shyly. And in the bright light she found her face. Pierre asked to enter the room, saw, and withdrew quietly.

"Toujours l'amour," he smiled to himself as he shuffled off for a final snuff of his pipe before he went to bed.

STOCKS HIGHER IN WALL ST. TRADING

New York, Dec. 15 — A sudden reversal in the securities markets gave Wall Street a forestale of holiday cheer today.

It was the important banking interests that placed the bids in the bond market to prevent further wide breaks in issues which they have sponsored, and that formed the positive basis for the recovery, generated a brisk recovery in the investment market, which quickly spread to stocks.

RAILS ARE LEADERS

Railroad securities were prominent in the uptick. In stocks, Delaware and Illinois stood out more than 20 points. Auburn gained about as much.

BOND SITUATION

Bonds acted well. The recent action of the bond market had been very positive, according to Wall Street.

Bankers pointed out that the mechanics of the market had failed to function normally, in view of the fact that the market had been reflecting less selling, selling out of loan collateral, and year-end reduction of investment accounts.

"The public's confidence in the market was definitely on the sidelines," he said.

As a result, offerings found virtually no bids under the market in the past few days, and prices in extraordinary price declines.

Of particular interest in the day's news was the testimony of Thomas W. Hedges, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, before the Senate finance committee, in which he scolded exaggerated reports concerning the "German problem" and the "German banks."

He pointed to the wide distribution of these credits and the fact that they constitute but a small part of the business of the participating institutions.

The aggregate number of active spindle hours reported for the month was 6,014,182,395.

The State's Ghoulish Traffic in Corpses

Like the sadistic gravedigger in Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities," the Bridgewater State Farm, through employees, is found to have conducted a regular traffic in the unclaimed bodies of inmates.

This is an atrocious, ghoulish in nature.

These unfortunate, helpless inmates are deprived of their mentality by a Power above and beyond their own.

They are stripped of their legal rights.

They are turned into asylums, sometimes like cattle, where they are dependent upon such interest as may be manifested by State employees alien to them and who have nothing more than a casual, formal concern for their welfare.

Going through this mortal life bereft of the tender relationships that exist among ordinary men and their families, they are at least entitled to the dignity and solemnity of death.

At least they might be afforded a decent funeral and a proper burial instead of their bodies being turned over like an animal carcasses to be disfigured and dismembered by hospital and medical services.

The human body is said to be the finest and most precious of God's creations.

And the man or woman has some claim to it in the sight of his or her Maker whether or not he or she in this sphere has been deprived of a legal, mental status.

If a man voluntarily and willingly offers his body after his death to medical experimentation that is his decision, to be disputed by no one other than himself.

But to sell his body, at $15 per torso, for autopsies by imbecile medicalists without his knowledge or consent is a foul traffic, inhuman, irreverent and indecent.

General Benjamin F. Butler, whose memory and sturdy fighting qualities we never discovered such a traffic in generation ago and the disclosures all but fomented a civil revolution among the outraged people of this State.

We had every good reason to believe that this sordid traffic had been obliterated and that decency had been restored.

But the traffic in bodies has evidently been resumed and is now in vogue for many years, presumably with the knowledge of the hospital authorities.

If they knew of it, they ought to be thrown out on their backs. If they didn't know it they ought to be punished for incompetence and neglect of the institution they are supposed to manage THOROUGHLY.

The good people of Massachusetts have every reason to be indignant and trait over these disclosures.

Bank Facts to Remember

In the lifetime of public officials, few ever receive such a dignified and eloquent tribute as Governor Ely bestowed upon Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy.

The Governor wrote the Bank Commissioner:

"The inclusion of your name to the Council for approval of your reappointment as Commissioner of Banks for the Commonwealth, I do so with the utmost confidence as to your integrity, ability and courage."

"During this year you have labored unceasingly in the interests of the people of Massachusetts."

"If they place the same faith in you that I do there need be no further alarm in regard to the banking situation in this State."

This unusual tribute is an acknowledgment, especially significant upon the assumption that they are members of opposite political parties and upon the fact that they have labored together when the conditions have required firmness, courage, patience and sound judgment.

We read with assurance today the statements by Dana S. Sylvester, who, as Executive Manager of the Savings Bank Association of Massachusetts, is equipped to speak authoritatively on all the savings banks in Massachusetts. They are in perfect condition, he declares.

We also are informed by the news dispatches that savings banks deposits increased 2.4 per cent this year in Massachusetts while the remainder of the country showed a decline.

The per capita savings in New England increased to $401 per inhabitant, the largest for any section of the country.

In view of these conditions, uneasiness can be dispelled and confidence continue firm.

Revolt in Parliament

Ominous are the rumblings in the British Parliament. Some of its members think that tradition is carried too far, and are tired of being tapped by the bell every time they reach for a smoke. They want the same privileges of smoking and chewing rum as we vouchsafe to our slaves in Washington.

If they cannot emulate the "Uncle Joe" Cannon in burning up stogies, they can, on the other hand, enjoy other personal liberties. Keep their play hats on, for example, and lay their feet on the desk, or yawn aloud and read newspapers.

The Parliament tea shop, meaning the bar, has a far wider choice of beverages than is available in the best Congressional cloakroom.

But if the British legislators really crave nicotine they might take to chewing tobacco. Any of our Western representatives could give them lessons in doing so without a betraying glint or mastication. And so could one or two members of the Supreme Court.

It Just Happened

George Washington was a great man, but that doesn't prove that he invented ice cream. Thru Dr. May Van Arsdale, a Columbia savant, refutes the claims made by the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

She says Marco Polo taught the Italians how to make it in the thirteenth century, on his return from China. Also that Saladin sent a frozen sherbet to Richard the Lion-hearted during a rest between battles, back in 1190.

Who taught our Army to freeze the Hindius, for sherbet of olden times, "sharbat," which is Hindustani. Even the swades is of modern origin, for Catherine de Medici ordered her French cream with a lick of syrup on it.

It looks as if America's contribution to the great cause of ice cream was to make it a sideline in drug stores.

Spreading Them Over the Land

What a costly experiment the "noble experiment" has turned out to be!

We drink more hard liquor than at any time before Prohibition.

For every corner saloon there now bloom a score or more of speakeasies.

Youth sees so-called Respectability wink at the law and does likewise. Bootleggers collect eleven hundred million dollars a year, more than the people used to pay for alcoholic drinks before Prohibition.

We spend $40,000,000 yearly attempting to enforce an unenforceable law, lose $911,000,000 more in excess taxes, and in return get what—widespread crime and lawlessness, official corruption, hypocrisy in high places and now, growing contempt for all laws and steadily increasing intemperance.

Isn't it time to call a halt?

More Moratorium Minstrels

Your Uncle Sam, imitates the distinguished Silas Wegg and "drops into poetry."

All follow suit, and this, so far as poetry can make it, is a happy day all around.

If you can think of a better poem or jingle for your Uncle Sam, or any of these characters, write it out carefully on one side of the paper and mail it to Uncle Sam. He may give you a fine reward. Maybe.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

Thoughts While Strolling
NEW YORK, Dec. 18—
Thoughts while strolling: That evening fog sweeping up from the harbor like a low flying swamp mist, Edmund Spenser comes about town. Those hideous baby-john taxis. Frank Bruen and Sam Harris. One of my favorite poems—George Buchanan. Description of Helen Menken in one word—wealthy. Peter Arno dresses sedately, awfully. The bounteous gleam of winter in Central Park. Nothing as clean as sunlight on running water. Norman Anthony and Lee Tracy look alike. Sadie Murray's apartment house. What became of the superb monochrome—Sergius? That spare where the old Century squatted. The old girl of Francine Larrimore's hair. Like a tone in a hundred fables. Set faces of horse-back riders on the bridge path. Clumpy-clip, clumpy-clip!

My idea of a loafing spot is a dog shop. Helen and Pete Kuykendall leaving the Marguerite. Those well bred countesses with monocles and a dash of lavender. Dandy for parties. Lots of European royalty around the Savoy Plaza. Sappy collegiate clerks in the Postal Telegraph office.

No actresses featuring backs today like Kitty Jordan and Lotta Faust. Al Smith always sits at a back table at Dinty Moore's and in a box at the theatre. Ted Lewis has a swell crop of hair. After all no hot beats a smelly thing dressing on the wet dress.

What became of the American cabaret, resort to outside ballroom. Barkers appear on stilts, as clowns. As Amos 'n' Andy, Charlie Chaplin and of course, Gaudy. The bubble is as pronounced as that at Luna in midsummer. It starts up business even if it gives the street a sidewalk it does not deserve.

The most gorgeous gown in so-called "chubs" is the "Pink Avenue," the site of Belle Longmire's dilapidated house on East 58th. It has the vaunted magnificence of the Grand Central. Side walls hang with circular moderate mirrors 25 feet in circumference. And there is a blinding dazzle of red, black and crystal, efflorescing in an occasional background of mirrors in its diamond strips. These enclose the largest drinking counter the town yet produced.

Broadway's "Coney Island" from these evenings, giving "garage" flair to the street to bring a highway of surprise. Nearly all cinema temples and burlesque houses, as well as photo parlors, dance halls and the rest, are produced.

Formal attire is obligatory at the Park Avenue Saturday nights and on other evenings those in evening clothes are given choice tables "to dress the room." Altogether it "out-continentals" the continent. And money dear! Plain orange velvet, par example, a dollar a slip.

Let's: "You and your silk hat at the theatre opening last night. Attu yoked!"

Yes, man, all duded up like rich planter's riders.

Pictures must not be too picturesque. —Emerson.

We Are Reapproached for Our Generosity!

The European press is aflame with indignation at the American Senate and House of Representatives.

The real author of the world's woes is apparently the United States. Our specific misconduct seems to be that we harkened to Europe's entreaties for succor during the war, and loaned the money with which she begged.

The Daily Herald of London brushes aside with impatience all suggestions of "mere moratoriums, postponements and easements" for the benefit of our debtors.

These are "well enough in their way," it says, "but the evil will not be extirpated until the war debts and reparations have been cancelled."

The Daily Telegraph of London speaks of "the whole ruinous complication of war indebtedness," and the Manchester Guardian does not hesitate to employ words of menace, bidding us to realize "the truth that revision of the war debts is inevitable and that the UNITED STATES HAD BETTER PREPARE FOR IT."

Shades of the Liberty Loans! We are a simple and guileless people. How moved we were as the official missions, sent by England, France and Italy, told us of the dangers and distresses of their countries. We thought we were generous when we curbed our consumption of food and fuel in order to rescue the civil populations of the warring European countries from cold and famine. How we stinted and borrowed and sacrificed in order to "give until it hurt!"

We have been mistaken. When we forgave our debtors $7,000,000,000 of their debt to us it was really nothing—at least in their opinion. As the London Herald puts it: "This was all well enough in its way, but it was not sufficient."

Our offense, in the eyes of Europe, seems to be that we do not readily disassociate PAYMENT OF A DEBT from the PROMISE TO PAY IT; or, to express it in another way, we still have the idea that a sovereign nation which asks us to rely upon its credit and faith will redempt its promises. The truth, however, seems to be that we will be upbraided by our debtors if we so much as refer to their promises.

For Secretary Mellon, our irritable debtors have the highest praise may exact from their memories that it was our vast loans which they feel at their undischarged liabilities, and to be standing between them and the rousing position taken by Congress that, the greater part of Europe's debts having been forgiven, the remaining thirty to forty per cent should, in all conscience, be paid within the sixty-two year period of grace which we have conceded.

Perhaps we may be able to live down the fact that we saved our European debtors from bankruptcy and military defeat. Time may efface from their memories that it was our vast loans which maintained their currencies, fed their civil populations, preserved their governments from revolutionary overthrow and sustained their armies in the field.

Their resentment at our lavish help may cool, and after the current depression passes, it may be seen that other causes contributed to it besides the unthanked generosity of the American people.

The Sheltered Place

Beside my windowpane I stayed
And from my comfortable seat
I watched the wet and cold parade
Of people trudging down the street,
Braving the north wind unafraid,
Undaunted by the stinging sleet.

Safe sheltered from the driving storm
I thought it good to be secure,
To sit with body snug and warm
Where fire and food and peace were near,
With not one need I must perform
And nothing that I must endure.

But as I watched them come and go
Beneath the burdens they must bear,
In spite of wind and sleet and snow
And driven by the lack of care,
I seemed to me I longed to know
Once more the thrill of battle there.

I wished again at doubtful pace
To be obliged to trudge the street,
To feel the cold wind on my face
And know the sting of rain and sleet,
For after all a sheltered place
Knows neither victory nor defeat.
